Background on Arizona Tape - JEF - KTA March 15, 1984

JEF: Gene Steiss, our caretaker, before his first wife died a few years ago - they both lived as a couple on our place - became attached to a religious cult that was going through Tucson. There was a young preacher by the name of Thomas that came through and he had the whole Steiss family wrapped up in his thing. And Gene's daughter, who is also Jean, and he five children joined this religious cult. One day Thomas, the preacher, came to the house to see me and asked if they could use our swimming pool to have a baptism for the Steiss family. I agreed and we turned over the swimming pool at the appointed time and about 50 cars drove into our place and all these people got out and they had a baptism in that pool that lasted for an hour or two. Remember, this is a number of years ago and Rhes and I pulled down all the blinds in the house and peeked out to see what was going on. It was really funny. And amongst the many people that joined his cult was a little girl that was working for us at the time. And there were about 50 people all around that neighborhood at the time that joined the cult. They left Tucson en masse and went to the southern part of the country - I think around New Orleans. And Thomas put these people all into a commune and he would send them out to get jobs and work in the day time and get money and bring it all back to him. And when he would accumulate enough money, then he would go to Las Vegas for a few days and gamble. Then he would come back and join the cult. Every night the cult would get together and would get drunk on wine and when they were all really, really completely tipsy, then he would expostulate and sound off. And he would threaten them - in cases he would threaten them with their lives if they didn't do his bidding. And he had them all right under his thumb. They even went out and stole for him. One of the people in the cult went out and worked in a jewelry store and all the time she worked in the store, she lifted jewelry which was then turned into the pawn shop and converted into money for the cult. And they went on a travelling thing - I believe in the neighborhood of Chattanooga, Tennessee - with all 50 of them in a bus, and the bus went over the side of a mountain. I think there were one or two that were killed in the accident but amongst those that were badly hurt was Gene Steiss' daughter, Jean. She and her five children were all in the bus. And Jean had a very badly butchered up leg - they went through all kinds of religious rites trying to heal that leg but it was unsuccessful - finally they had to amputate the leg and Jean now has an artificial limb. Jean, herself, is psychic, quite psychic. And when she drives by our place on the side of the road which is a half a mile down from my house, she very often sees a gigantic rainbow that goes over from the south west corner of our property to the northeast corner in the foothills of the mountains. She has always said that this is a very special, holy place that we have there.

And here is the rest of the story that is recorded on the tape. Gene, the father, has a path up the mountain in back of my home way up into the foothills, almost a half a mile up the mountain in back of us. The top of that path is a series of rocks that go across this way and make a gigantic cross. So they have this path that goes up to the cross. The only people that know about this path are the people that have been on my place. Gene and his new wife and some of the other people that worked for us have used that path.

Well, Gene, the father, was up there a couple of months ago, we'll say - took a hike up there. When he got to the top of the mountain, here was a beautiful little puppy dog sitting up there on a rock. Now if you know anything about the desert, there's no way that a puppy dog is ever going to navigate a half a mile up a mountain and if he tries it he's going to be full of burrs and dirt and he'd be a lucky animal to make it. He was as clean as a hound's tooth, so to speak. There he was and he was just as happy as could be waiting for Gene. Gene picks up this dog - at first he thought maybe it was a baby coyote because coyotes kill dogs and if this dog were wandering up that thing alone, a coyote would as sure as anything sense it - they eat them alive. Anyway, he picked up the dog and carried it down the mountain and gave it to his daughter Jean. Jim saw the dog and he's the most beautiful little animal you ever saw, he'd been spade and well taken care of. I don't know what kind of dog he is really - he impresses me as kind of like a Scotch Collie but it's not - it's a smaller dog, but just as loving an animal as I've ever seen.

So when Jim was communicating with the other side, I believe it was Cato - story on other tape... Another part of the story is this - this fellow Thomas threatened several people in the cult with their lives. Three or four people in the cult have mysteriously died without explanation. I gather from the answer that Cato gave me that Thomas was behind these murders. And this little girl Jenny, that worked for us, her body was found half burned in a canvas. So Thomas was using this over the head of his cult - he'd say "Look, things are going to happen to you." (Previous incarnation, Manchurian dynasty with Steiss family - this time intended to kill them all)

K: Where is Thomas now?

JEF: Thomas is free - they've never been able to find him or apprehend him. The cult is on the loose - but most people in Tucson got out of it after the accident - one way or another they all got out of it - they broke it up.

But, here is the other part of the story. Thomas had told the cult one night when he was drunk that Mrs. Fetzer would be extremely ill and I would have to call upon him and he would miraculously heal her.

Let's see if I can get this in sequence now. I did all I could to help the Steiss' at the time because they became so apprehensive about the health of their daughters. I didn't want the FBI.

In the meantime - in spite of the fact that Thomas can not be apprehended, he still had a hex put on our place - he had some negative energy there. And it was his negative energy that - I am now satisfied after listening to this story - that precipitated Khea's fall over the front steps. When she had her accident I found her at the bottom of our front steps laying in a pool of blood with both wrists shattered and carried her to the top of the steps and went through the hospitalization and all the rest of it in Tucson.

Another part of the story is that this evil energy was around our place. While Jim was there, Jim kept complaining several mornings "Boy, did I have a rough time last night. I was awake most of the night." But he didn't tell me what he was awake about. Finally then Cato said, "We had to bring Jim here and Jim has now taken on Thomas." And he has been eliminated from this place forever and he says the energy now has been restored to the beautiful energy that the place has. So that is the story behind the story that you will get on tape. You wouldn't know what Cato was talking to me about without this background.

And now I know. Khea then was not in the bad condition that she's in now and I know she would never go near those steps. She would always take her little walks and she would knock on the window of my little office to let me know she was all right. And I missed her. I didn't hear the knocks on the window and I went out looking for her and found her at the bottom of the steps and I just feel that that man was after her just as he was after all of the Steiss family. There's got to be more karmic thing in on this in order to have it get up to this kind of situation.

It's funny because I had just spontaneously asked Jim to come along and go to Arizona with me on the phone without even thinking. There were reasons for him to go. There were other things that happened while we were out there. I've been thinking about developing the real estate out there and another person - Little Fox came through an Indian who had lived on the place for 350 years that tells us all about the energies around the place that correspond to what Jean had seen in the rainbow and what influence this whole area has over the city of Tucson and about the lights that come down from the mountain and how we are not to develop certain parts and leave it all clean - that this has a future holy purpose. And all this happened - you'll get this all on tape.

K: When Jim was having problems at night about the Thomas thing, was he having a psychic attack? Did the guy attack him?

JEF: I don't know - I didn't think to ask him. You can ask him, sure. All of this that Rhea's gone through. Of course we're having her chelated now and I think the results are going to be terrific. She showing signs of at least understanding that I haven't seen for three or four years
